Course Description:

This course aims to provide students with an introduction to some of the key issues and debates surrounding thinking about narrative, such as its relation to the world it represents, its relation to the society where it functions, its political and spiritual functions, and the elements that compose narrative. The focus of this year's course is on theories of myth. Myths are amongst our oldest narratives and express human attempts to answer questions of fundamental and universal kinds.

Course Objective:

Those who complete the course successfully will be able to:

- theorize myth
- understand myth as it functions in a number of societies
- understand how myth is used in literature
- recognize patterns and types of myth
- understand the narrative structures of myth

Texts:

Leeming, David A. . OUP.
Segal, Robert A. OUP.
Sophocles, Penguin.

A Note on the Purpose of Office Hours: office hours are an opportunity for informed discussion outside class time.

What I expect of you:

to have read, thought about, researched and have some views about, the issue in hand.

What you should expect of me:

to help you develop the ideas you already have; to help you look at things in alternative ways;
to make you aware of anything that is relevant that you may not have come upon in the research you have already done.

So, I cannot answer questions such as, "Is this thesis sentence OK" because in so doing I become a co-author of your work while, at the same time, discouraging you from independent, capable thought. What I can do is help you think more carefully about what you already have in mind, help you see what you do and do not know, what you intend to argue and what evidence you have to support your contentions.

Also, the office hour immediately prior to an assignment's due date has the same number of minutes in it as do other hours. If you leave it to the last minute before an assignment is due to come to an Office Hour, there is no guarantee that others in the class have been any better organized than you and so there may be no available time. Plan accordingly.

A Note about email: I strongly encourage you to come to speak with me during Office Hours rather than sending me emails. You are at university to learn how to think. Emails will not help you do that. While you attend university, you have access to many able, educated people. It is not always so in life. Take advantage of

Late Submissions:

Essays and other assignments are due on the date specified above. Essays may be given to me in the lecture or dropped off in the Essay Drop-Off Box outside the English Department's Main Office. Essays left in the Essay Drop-Off Box after the office closes will be date-stamped the next day. Late essays will be penalized 3% (including weekends). Essays submitted more than seven (7) days after the deadline will not be accepted and will receive a grade of zero. Late essays will receive a grade but no comments.

Plagiarism:

The following statement on plagiarism is from the UWO Senate:

Students must write their essays and assignments in their own words. Whenever students take an idea, or a passage of text from another author, they must acknowledge their debt both by using quotation marks where appropriate and by proper referencing such as footnotes or citations. Plagiarism is a major academic offence (see Scholastic Offence Policy in Western Academic Calendar).

Plagiarism checking: The University of Western Ontario uses software for plagiarism checking. Students may be required to submit their work in electronic form for plagiarism checking. Be aware that if you are caught engaging in plagiarism, it will result, at the very least, in a zero for the assignment.
