

Qualifications : The successful candidate will have a PhD in epidemiology, child and youth health. Furthermore, the candidate must have strong personal and communication skills and be able to work effectively to promote interdisciplinary initiatives.

A successful candidate will be expected to develop a child health-related research program, lead research projects, interdisciplinary collaboration on research grants, and serving as a faculty member in the Department of Paediatrics and Epidemiology and Biostatistics will also be expected. The candidate will be responsible for teaching at the undergraduate, graduate and post-graduate levels. Responsibilities include the supervision of undergraduate, graduate, and post-graduate research students.

Compensation Details: Compensation for this position will be an academic salary commensurate with qualifications and experience.

at 02 Tc 0.c02 T 0.nTc 0 Tj 9 0 Td [(r)-6.3 4.01-

Western has a full students. The

To apply :