This course requires you to engage in critical reflection as you embark on your career as health professionals; at times this may be uncomfortable or even painful. I ask that you practice humility, work through defensiveness, and embrace vulnerability as you embark on this journey of personal development.

In this course, the PEP Modules and Evidence-Based Research Assignment have a 72-hour no-questions-asked late policy that applies. The Juris Prudence Quiz is timed but available over an extended period of time. The Philosophy Statement is due at the latest date and time possible, and therefore, the 72-hour no-questions-asked extension does not apply to the final assignment, as it would result in the assignment being due after the last day of class, which is against Western policies. Flexibility has been built into your course assignments.
